MOTHER CHARGES FATHER 'KIDNAPED' LITTLE BOY

ACCUSES HUBBY AS KIDNAPER

Mother Charges Four-Year-Old Son Was Stolen by Father in Wilmington
Private detectives have joined the police in a country-wide search for four-year-old William J. Marshall, Jr., who was kidnapped by his father at Silver Lake, Wilmington, over a month ago. The child's parents have not been living together for three years and at the time of the kidnapping his mother, a concert singer, was in New York.

The kidnapping of the boy took place, according to the mother, Mrs. Helen Marshall of No. 12 Mountain Avenue, Somerville, at a camp in Wilmington owned by her father, Martin Troland.

"I was in New York at the time," she declared, "and was just about to close a contract with a concert tour, which would enable me to take my boy with me when I learned that he had been taken away—kidnaped—by his father."

"I should have suspected that something like that would happen, as my husband has at various times threatened to steal my boy from me. I know that he does not care one bit for the boy, because when he was living with me, he ignored him altogether. He went about his business just as if we never had a child. I cannot understand his sudden affection, unless he wishes to break my heart, and he will succeed if my boy is not returned soon."

My boy was taken from the arms of his aunt, Miss Martin Troland, while they were returning to the father's camp in Wilmington. My husband picked them up along the State road, and offered to give them a lift to the camp. On arriving at the camp, Miss Troland got out and was about to lift my boy out when my husband stepped on the gas, and sped off. I have not seen my boy since and I am distressed."

WARRANT FOR FATHER.
A description of the boy and his father have been sent to police in over the country. At the office of the Watts Detective Agency, Inc., operators of which organization are seeking the country for the missing boy, officials state they have a fair idea of where the boy is, and expect to pick him up within a very short time.

In the meantime the E. Somerville police are holding warrants for the arrest of the boy's father, on charges of failure to comply with a court decree, ordering him to support his child and for kidnapping.

MUCH-JILTED ALLISTER IS FINALLY WED

Paris, Oct. 5.—The world's most patient suitor was married today.

For two years he had waited at the church while Mary Louise Baker, Chicago society girl, had been changing her mind about marrying him.

Finally she changed it permanently and gave Allister McCormick, son of "the" McCormicks of Chicago, the air and took the crown on a voyage home.

Allister became the husband today of Miss Joan Tyndale Stevens, British society beauty. They were married at City Hall, Strand, Ward.

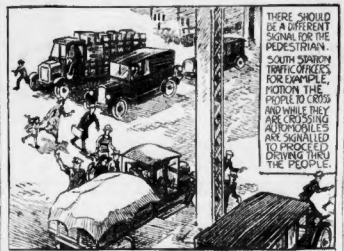

The romance grew out of the distressing love affair between the Chicago beauty and the McCormick heir.

Miss Stevens had for a witness her stepfather, Charles M. M. Astley, Leicester Hamilton McCormick, Jr., was his brother's witness. Mrs. Astley gave the bride away.

Newsprinters in Paris who had written thousands of words about Allister and Mary Louise Baker, attended the ceremony and wished the young couple the best of luck.

They had received a notice that Allister and Miss Stevens would wed, but had waited for another reason. It was almost two years ago that Allister went to a fashionable Chicago church in his prime Albert to wed Miss Baker, she didn't arrive and since that time, Allister's wedded outfit has passed the around.

The most severely injured were Mrs. Edmund Parker, No. 104 Parker street, and her baby, Phyllis, both are under treatment at the home of a relative in Swansea, and the full extent of their injuries will not be determined until an X-ray examination has been made.

The others injured were: Edmund Parker, who was operating the motorcycle; Thomas Cooke, and his brother-in-law who was on the rear seat; and five-year-old Clinton Parker, who was in the side car with his mother and baby sister. All three were considerably bruised and shaken. The car which collided with the motorcycle was being operated by Reginald Wellington of Swansea.

EGYPT PRINCE NEW SUITOR OF MRS. WHEELER

By Universal Service.
New York, Oct. 5.—Mrs. Claretta Calancho Wheeler, who was a divorcee from Albert Gallatin Wheeler last March, handed from the White Star Line's liner with eighteen trunks and news of a proposed marriage from a superlatively wealthy Egyptian prince.

The former show girl, whose marital difficulties occupied the attention of various courts for this year, admitted that although she has not definitely set her mind against it, she is in a hurry to accept her new suitor.

The prince, who is middle-aged and "quite the nicest gentleman" and who won honorary degrees from French and English universities, is so devoted to Mrs. Wheeler that he plans to come to the United States in a short time in a further endeavor to win her.

He proposed twice in Paris, and the return voyager, and believes that a proposal or a series of them might be more effective in America.

"But," continued Mrs. Wheeler, "I am not in any hurry to be married again. I'm rather skeptical about marriage."

Mrs. Wheeler will stay with her mother, Mrs. Annie B. Christie, at No. 110 West 13th street.

BOSTON MEN FACE STOCK DEAL CHARGE

Midwest, Oct. 5.—Michael W. Ward and Frank Campbell of Boston, charged with attempted larceny by Edward Kirkham of Holliston, had their cases continued to October 8 in Framingham Court. According to the police, the men offered to exchange 100 shares of capital stock in the Kirkham Motor Company held by Kirkham, and worth $1000, for new stock with a bonus.

GEM CROOK'S ODD DISGUISE FAILS HIM

Paris, Oct. 5.—The worldwide search for Gabriel Alphonse Mourry, alias Henri Bolat, who in the guise of a butler robbed the New York home of Albert K. Shattuck, failed in 1922, was ended when police shot the bandit in his villa in the town of Chelles, near Paris, after a desperate battle.

Pulke got track of Mourry a short time ago. He had spent several months at Chelles, twelve miles from Paris.

It is learned that he passed his time fishing in the Marne. He frequented a little restaurant at Chelles during the last few months, posing as a retired carpenter. He became fairly well known and about it his regular job for his landlord.

He had taken every precaution to a hospital.

K. OF C. MAN WILL LECTURE ON KLAN

Worcester, Oct. 5.—An echo of the recent sensational gathering of the Ku Klux Klan in Worcester rang out when Alameda Council, Knights of Columbus, announced that Peter W. Collins, K. of C. lecturer, would deliver an answer to the Klan at a mass meeting Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Alameda Hall.

avoid identification, having shaved his beard and taken out the gold fillings in two teeth in his upper jaw, and also had removed the false marks from his hand. He is said to have been present at his father's funeral disguised as a woman.

Mourry, who was not so badly wounded in his fight with the police as was at first thought, will probably be arraigned on a charge of attempted murder, inasmuch as he shot a policeman at the time of his capture. The other was only slightly hurt.

It is understood that the French officials will not press their charge if the United States authorities request that Mourry be extradited for the Shattuck robbery. He is still in the hospital.

YOUTH WINS IN HOTEL MAN'S ODD ROMANCE

Haverhill, Oct. 5.—Youth wins. The prize is the substance of George J. Christie's smile.

The loser is Mrs. Doris Reed Christie, former wife of the actor and hotel proprietor who was thrust into an orphanage by the death of her father, Lena Christie, Mermaid Isle phone operator.

Mrs. Christie No. 1 or thereabouts in forty. Lena Christie is eight. They can't come back, says Christie, repeating the old Italian saying.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gills, parents of the youthful bride, have wed about them home, although the couple were arrested in Savannah, Ga., when they stepped from a hotel boat. The charge was abduction, preferred by a brother of Lena Gills.

WILL DROP COMPLAINTS

Christie then married Lena Gills. The abduction charge was to come up today in court and it was expected it would be dropped because Mr. and Mrs. Gills have agreed that Christie need not marry legally to Mrs. Doris Reed Christie.

Christie declares that his marriage to Doris Reed was illegal because she hadn't a divorce long enough. Mr. and Mrs. Gills say that Christie's marriage to their daughter is legal. It is possible the courts will be asked to decide this point.

"It was her beautiful smile that attracted Mr. Christie," said the young bride. "I just fell for her at a moment's notice. It was so entrancing that I was almost sure to lose my wits for the time."

THE ANCEL MARRIAGE

"Let's forget everything with them in Savannah. My heart isn't even there," said Christie. "We are not to welcome them home."

Christie had intended to give to his marriage to Mrs. Christie No. 1. It was a formal ceremony, a formality merely to cover the fact that his marriage was illegal.

While the wind blew thirty miles an hour and waves ran mountains high, the mother's last look fell on the baby cuddled to her breast. GIRL FORGER IS EXAMINED FOR SANITY

Rose Fritz, twenty-two-year-old Roxbury girl, charged with having stolen $25,000 by means of forgery and falsification of the accounts of her employer, William Solomon, silk merchant, is in the Psychopathic Hospital for observation.

She was remanded to the county jail, after failing to furnish $7,000 bail in which she was held, but was later brought before Judge Laurie, in the judge's lobby of municipal court, and there committed to the hospital.

The total amount of the alleged theft from Solomon and the Boylston National Bank, on which the forged checks were drawn, will be $25,000 by the forgeries, and possibly much more through juggling of the customers' accounts, according to Leo Wasserman, the auditor who was summoned by Solomon to examine his books when he became suspicious of the girl bookkeeper.

The work of a master mind, directed by Miss Fritz's manipulation of the accounts, is seen by Accountant Wasserman. He declares the way she made the books balance and the cash balance reconcile with the bank statements was much too clever a job for the ordinary girl bookkeeper.

Every one of the girl's friends may be questioned by the police in an effort to discover if there was some one directing her alleged juggling of the books and telling her how to do it.

The thefts extended over a period beginning in June, 1921, according to the auditor. It was stated that Solomon originally had an auditor examine the books regularly, but shortly after Miss Fritz went to work for him in January, 1921, she is said to have told him that it was an unnecessary expense and she was capable of doing the bookkeeping thoroughly and efficiently. Solomon then dropped the auditor.

The thefts have averaged $1,000 by forgery alone. They began with amounts of $300 or less, but last month amounted to $2,000.

Miss Fondi Weds

MRS. AGOSTINO

MISS FONDI IS NOW BRIDE OF MERCHANT

Providence, Oct. 4.—The last chapter in the controversy between Rose Representative Joseph Venezia and Josephine Fondi, the girl who accused him of breach of promise to marry, was enacted today when the girl became the bride of another.

The husband of the Italian bride is Raffaele D'Agostino, twenty-one years old, proprietor of a variety store. The couple were married by a Superior Court judge.

The girl aroused legislative interest recently when she waited for Representative Venezia in a corridor armed with a revolver wrapped up in a paper. When the legislator appeared, she was arrested for breach of peace. At that time Miss Fondi charged she had divorced her husband, Michele Nobile, an Venezia's promise to marry her. Her marriage to D'Agostino was a surprise to all who were concerned in the case.

Fessendens Sure of Place in 'Whos' News,' Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN
HOSPITABLE Mrs. and Mrs. Sewall H. Fessenden and their family comprise one of the jolliest households of the Manchester Colony, wherever we add them to our "Whos News Along the North Shore."

The oldest daughter of the house is slim and lovely Mrs. "Ollie" Ames, Jr. (Caroline Fessenden). She has been making her home with her parents ever since the tragic death of her soldier-husband, who fell on the battlefields of France.

The former Caroline Fessenden—she has brown hair and twinkling eyes—leaves not only as one of the charmingest matrons of Boston's "Four Hundred," but also has one of the most smartly governed. Equilibrating simplicity is the keynote of her attire. Her costumes are remarkable for their modesty of color. Never does she favor even the slightest blasse effect.

Next comes jolly Mrs. Freddy Burk (Harriet Fessenden), who resembles Mrs. Ames not a little, except that the latter is the taller.

Mrs. Burk is not really a member of the Fessendens household any more, but she and her husband have said frequent visits to the Summer home in Manchester. The Burks, who lived in New York for several seasons following their marriage a few years ago, are now members of the large, younger-married set of Chestnut Hill way.

The third daughter is blonde-haired Louise Fessenden, whose blue eyes and very black lashes lend her face a distinct charm. Miss Fessenden only recently returned from a Summer abroad, where she obtained a highly deserved vacation. For Louise Fessenden has given up her morning, day in and day out, as a volunteer in the surgery department of the Children's Hospital.

Besides, she has a very pleasing voice, and two seasons ago she played and sang the heroine's role in "Now and Then," the Vesper Club show. The youngest of the quartette is Mrs. Edward L. Bigelow (Rose Fessenden), whose marriage last January to the Harvard '21 man caused a much-discussed flutter of interest among their set. The Bigelows, I believe, have been spending the Summer on the Fessendens estate where young Harry Fessenden, the only son of the house, has also been.

Mrs. and Mrs. Fessenden have a town house on Raleigh street and an intermediate home in Chestnut Hill.

Mrs. and Mrs. SIDNEY E. HUTCHINSON and their family are leaving "Sydney Terrace," their Summer home at Beverly Farms, and are returning this week to their Winter home in Philadelphia. Mrs. Hutchinson was formerly Miss Edith Stensbury.

The goods taken have a total value of about $300.

3-YEAR-OLD BOY FROM SCOTLAND REACHES HUB

Bombardier down in Nahant, N. J., sent a wireless to Reahway recently: "Send Joe," it read.

Joe came here on the steamship Cameron. His full name is Joseph George. He was on deck when a Boston American reporter climbed aboard.

"See you got here, Joe?" said the writer. Joe nodded, weighing two suit cases carefully, but not overbalancing him as he stepped down the gangplank.

"You're from Scotland ain't you?" said the reporter very gravely. "What's your name?"

"I'm Joseph," said the boy. "What's your name?"

"I'm Joe," said the boy. "What's your name?"

"I'm Joe," said the boy. "What's your name?"

Here I Am!

POLITICAL URGE MADE HARVEY RESIGN

London, Oct. 5 (I.N.S.)—The outstanding motive behind the retirement of Colonel George Harvey as ambassador to the Court of St. James is his desire to be on the ground and have a hand in the pre-convention jockeying that will precede the selection of a Republican nominee for the presidency next year. His friends here have no doubt of this.

When he returned from the United States a few weeks ago Colonel Harvey was accompanied by Will H. George Harvey Richard Washburn Child

DEATH IN BLAST BARES SECRET WEDDING

The death of William J. McFadden, thirty-one years old, of No. 423 E. 1st street, Lynn, in an explosion at the Clark Street Municipal Quarry which killed two and injured three, brought to light his secret marriage to a Lynn girl June 24. Friends and relatives of the dead man first learned of his marriage when his widow, formerly Margaret Finnegan of No. 20 Beach street, Lynn, called at the home of his mother, Mrs. Jennie McFadden, No. 423 East street, Lynn, revealed her identity and offered condolences to the grief-stricken mother.

Noiseless Trolley Car Appears in Twin Cities

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 5.—The Twin Cities' newest noiseless street car, equipped with roller bearings and automobile brakes, has appeared here. REMBRANDT IS FAKE, TOO, VAN DYKE SAYS

New York, Oct. 5.—Officials of the Metropolitan Museum of Art today issued a blunt assertion by John C. Hayes, director of the Harding campaign, and the two have spent much time in going over the political situation that has developed since the death of Mr. Harding.

Both Harvey and Hayes, it is said, are inclined to believe President Coolidge is the logical Republican candidate, but thus far they have not committed themselves and in all probability will not do so for some time yet.

They are more fearful of a split in the party than any other one thing.

Harvey himself is not talking about his future plans, except to say that his "private business" needs his attention. He recently told friends: "When I quit the embassy I am going to return to my own profession—writing. History perhaps."

Apparently created no great impression here. He has made a great many friends in London, but in the main he has been too out of touch to become a great popular figure with the English as was the late Walter Riney.

VOTE TO UNIONIZE BIG INDUSTRIES

Portland, Ore., Oct. 5 (A.P.)—The American Federation of Labor convention, now in its fifth day's session, has disposed of a group of resolutions providing for uniting the textile mills of the South, the steel industry, the coal industry, and other workers.

Progress has been reported in committee work on a child labor amendment to the Federal constitution. The measure has been characterized by President Campers as the most important before the convention.

It is even probable that high officials of the British government are secretly pleased at the going of the picturesque colonel.

The resignation of Richard Washburn Child, Ambassador to Italy, has been tendered to President Coolidge and will become effective about January 1, 1924.

Matthew Wool of the Photo Engravers was re-elected president of the International Labor News Service and R. E. Woolman, editor of the Illinois Tradesman of Illinois, elected secretary-treasurer. Charles H. Shaw, Workers' Journal, Boston, was named vice-president.

1000 ENJOY AMERICAN'S COMIC SUPPLEMENT MASQUERADE

CLEVER MAKE UPS CAUSE ROUND OF HILARITY

"Jiggs," "Gallagher and Sheen" and the rest of the north-provoking crew of the Boston American came to life, stepped out of the pages of this newspaper and furnished more than one thousand guests one of the most unique and entertaining nights of their lives at the Boston American's Comic Supplement Masquerade in Crescent Garden Ballroom, Revere Beach.

There never was a masquerade like this. McManus and his fellow artists would have relished seeing their creations in reality.

PRIZE WINNERS. From the moment when the first strains of the Crescent Garden twelve-piece orchestra swept through the hall and opened the grand march until the affair ended with award of the prizes, there was one continuous round of hilarity and surprise.

The applause given the prize winners, indignantly confirmed the opinion of the judges. And the volume of the final cheer for the Boston American was expressive of the success of the masquerade.

Prizes totaling $100 in gold were distributed among the twelve masqueraders who most cleverly re-created in clothes and makeup those characters which feature the Boston American's daily four-page comic supplement.

LIST OF PRIZE WINNERS. Following is a list of the winners: Mrs. Madeline Augustus of No. 23

COSTUMES THAT WON AWARDS

nor Lee, of The Parkway, Medford, as Gallagher.

The judges were leading Philadelphia and Boston artists.

They were: Hayden Jones, Franklin P. Collier, Marion Paley, Walter Charles Bailey, Joe Pastorek, William Wilton Wharton and Mrs. Wilner.

The masquerade was opened by a grand march through the ball room with the "slow long line of contestants clad in their multi-colored and varied style costumes."

Rear after rear of laughter burst forth as characters were recognized. "Gallagher and Sheen" drew great applause, as did the impersonations of "Krazy Kat," "Captain Kattamammer" and "Skinny Shamer."

PINCHOT ORDER MEETS PLACID DEFIANCE

Philadelphia, Oct. 3.—Philadelphia saloons were still doing business today, despite the order of Governor Pinchot and the Federal Department of Justice to close their doors and dismantle their fixtures.

A few of the 1,500 or more establishments had obeyed the order, but the attitude of the vast majority of the proprietors apparently was one of placid defiance.

The next step of the leaders in the "dry" campaign was expected to be application to the Federal courts for injunctions under the "radio" provision of the prohibition law.

The dry crusade has spread to Chester, twenty miles south of this city.

Don't Increase the Dead Army Cheap Air Travel Wine Makes Itself You Must Fight, Mr. Singh Current Events

By Arthur Brisbane—
 Copyright, 1921, by The Boston Herald.

THERE IS agitation and anger because graves of American soldiers in France are neglected. The anger is justified and government announcement that each soldier shall have a small stone headstone will be welcome.

But those dead men, if they could speak, would say: "To please us, try not to increase the number of these graves. It is too late to save us, and grave-stones won't do us much good. But don't increase our number, by foolishly mixing in the troubles of nations that will not have peace."

THE AIR GIANT ZRL, bigger than the biggest steamship, uses less than a gallon of gasoline per mile in her flight of 2,200 miles. A big ocean steamer would need two tons of coal to one gallon of gas for a giant flyer. That shows the difference in power needed to push aside light air and heavy water and it tells you how cheaply men will travel in years to come if they get rid of that "all the traffic can bear" slogan. It is quite probable that, in future, one day's work will earn the actual cost of a flight around the world.

CONGRESSMAN JOHN F. HILL of Baltimore for making wine at home, is to be indicted if prohibition can manage it. Mr. Hill suggested grapes and put the juice in bottles. That's all he did. There was no "wine," alcoholically speaking, in existence while he was at work on the grapes. What he did was no crime, for there's no law against squeezing grapes. Later, without assistance from him, the liquid turned into wine. It changed itself or eternal law changed it.

Can a man be indicted for what happens inside of a bottle with no assistance of any kind from the man? Should not Nature be indicted, or perhaps prayers offered for a miracle to prevent fermentation?

NJEL SINGH one of three hundred million Asiatics ruled in India by a few Englishmen, thousands of miles away, has a grievance. When family members of the British Empire rules, Canada, Australia and other colonies of the British empire are represented by elected delegates. India's vast crowd is represented by men selected by Englishmen.

As usual, the trouble, if with a single individual or three hundred million Asiatics, is the same. If you lack force in your self some outside force will rule you. Among the three hundred millions of Asiatics of India dwell 190,000 Englishmen, and they rule the 300,000,000 although they are outnumbered 3,000 to one. Could Mr. Singh imagine one Englishman keeping down 3,000 firemen? In these days you get justice when you fight for it. Even then, it is slow.

In five thousand years, India has written millions of different books. And in all those books the word "liberty" does not once appear. That's the trouble with India. Some day a man will come along, not a Ghazi, trying to fight Manchester with a spinning wheel, but some person of mind with thick hairy wrist, coarse hands, short stubby fingers—he'll let India elect her delegates to the British imperial family reunion.

MR. HULBERT in New York City, the acting Mayor, nobly determined to protect the public, says that increased tax assessments are no excuse for increasing rents. It's well meant, but is it wise? When you make it unnecessary for the little renter to think about taxes you make it unnecessary for him to think about his local government.

WHEN THE ROMANS got broad and gladiatorial shows for nothing they ceased worrying about the price of wheat, but they were on the down grade.

When New York increases its tax assessment one billion in a year, they ought to be impressed, surprised, on the little books, not

VETERAN BALKS AT $20 RENT INCREASE

Frank Egner, World War veteran, his wife, ill in bed with a ten-day old baby, and their five other children, faced eviction today from his home in Cambridge.

Egner refuses to pay an increase of $20 in the rent of his home proved tenement at No. 53 Windsor street, for which he has been paying $12.50 a month. The American Legion have been acting to prevent the eviction and the Cambridge police have been asked to intervene.

2-VAROMETER RADIO FREQUENCY SET

A three-tube set with two stages of radio-frequency which uses varimeters in place of transformers. This method gives greater amplification and is more reliable than the usual transformer coupled set. It is also more compact and can be used on the detector tube as well as on the detector tube.

VARIOMETERS AS TRANSFORMERS IN R. F. SET

Two methods of coupling the various stages of radio-frequency amplifiers are open to the experimenter. These are the transformer method and the varimeter method. The transformer method is the more common, but the varimeter method is becoming more popular. Each of the three methods has its advantages and its disadvantages, and the final choice must be something of a compromise.

Radio Trade Notes

The Tremont Electrical Supply Co., 78 Stuart street, has the largest loud speaker of any store in the city. Every afternoon and evening the street before the store is crowded with people listening to the music broadcast from the store. This store is well stocked, especially with small parts, and is located on what is known as the main trade artery of the city.

The New England Cycle Co., located at No. 140 Washington street, has given more room to radio goods and has greatly increased its stock. One of the changes is to be used by the store.

"Eckers" an attachment to make the photograph take the place of loud speaker, is on the market. "Eckers" will connect any type of loud speaker to the camera. It gives good sound amplification, and produces a clear, mellow tone. It sells for $12.75.

The thoughtful and cultured Bostonian puts more into his head than into his pocketbook.—R. P. Gilson, teacher.

Revolution in Germany

Not Until All Else Fails
Copyright, 1924, Ben Cro

More talk of civil war in Germany. They would have had it long ago had the Hohenzollerns, with their blood and iron, their "God and Me" theories, been the only teachers.

But, fortunately, far below the imperial throne the Social Democratic party has been at work for forty years.

When the Kaiser conscripted the peasants and brought them from their villages to the big cities, the educated men of the Social Democratic party taught the men and boys from the farms something about history, about the rights of men and liberty.

Fortunately for Germany, therefore, the majority of her people, including all of those conscripted into the army, KNOW that civil war is STUPIDITY, that bloody revolution is FOLLY, that it is merely playing the game of the tyrant that always blossoms out when the revolution is over.

Thanks to Social Democratic education, Germany has gone through such trials and humiliations as no modern nation has ever endured.

But how long the German republic will last no man can say.

The Germans handling bank notes of a billion marks each, unable to guess how much they will be worth tomorrow, are bound to talk revolution occasionally. But how, and against whom, shall they rise?

Herr Stresemann, head of the government, by his action has warned the revolutionists that there is to be any shooting the government of the republic will START it, and keep it up until the revolutionists have had all they want. And in the background there is France, her big guns, little guns, flying machines and poison gas, to discourage action, ready to keep down any attempt to free Germany from her slavery born of the war.

And there are the great German money lords. It suits them to pay workmen with worthless marks and sell their products abroad for good money. Germany knows now that war does not pay.

Build Postal Savings

Thus, Keep Cash in the U. S.
Copyright, 1924, Ben Cro

In August, savings in the United States Postal Savings Banks increased $800,000, the largest increase since September, 1920.

That fact will interest prohibitionists. There is no doubt that money formerly invested in whiskey goes into banks now.

If the postal banks were run in a business-like way, giving ENCOURAGEMENT, reasonable rates of interest, and other fair treatment to depositors, the deposits would be gigantic. The government could finance itself through the postal savings bank alone. And, incidentally, hundreds of millions sent abroad now by workers here, because they do not understand—therefore they do not trust—our perfectly sound and safe private banking would remain in the United States. And these postal savings would ultimately find their way into "capital" and into the balances of the big banks.

Anything that discourages the little saver or FAILS TO ENCOURAGE him is a bad thing for the big man. The big man, however, learns that slowly.

Monkeys and Their Owners

Which Were More Foolish
Copyright, 1924, Ben Cro

Many men ruin themselves and their careers by talking too much. Two high-class monkeys in Italy did about the same thing, although they couldn't talk.

These high-class apes had been bought by two rich citizens of Naples who desired to have Dr. Voronoff transfer glands from the monkeys' bodies to their own bodies.

The monkeys escaped from captivity, frightened hundreds of peasants, whose views on Darwinism seem to have been unsettled by the strange "old-man" faces of the apes.

Finally, the monkeys rang an alarm bell, perhaps trying to climb up the rope. Now they are prisoners once more, and science will try to transfer their youth and energy, via their glands, to the bodies of their more highly developed Neapolitan brothers.

Whether the monkeys, when they rang the alarm bell, or the Neapolitans, when they ordered the glands transferred, were the more foolish, time will tell.

Senator La Follette

Our neighbor, the Boston Post, has published an account of Senator La Follette, which, we believe, is one of the first attempts outside the editorial column, in the newspapers of New England to do La Follette anything like justice.

La Follette has always been a much misunderstood man in New England, just as old Senator Ben Tillman of South Carolina used to be misunderstood here when he was fighting Grover Cleveland. It took our own Senator Hoar to astonish us into some respect for Ben Tillman.

Senator La Follette is one of the greatest figures that American public life has produced since the Civil War. He is coming into power in the next Congress, because power cannot be denied him. In America today and for some years to come, we hope, it is impossible to suppress men, who, like Robert M. La Follette, possess to an unusual degree ability, industry, courage, sacrificial spirit, patriotism, capacity to work, the right point of view on public questions, enthusiasm and a personality that binds their co-workers in profound confidence to them.

STOMACHS REPAIRED AND RESTORED AS YOU WATCH

By Herbert Kaufman

SURGEONS, lately, take people to pieces as casually as a watchmaker rebuilds clockwork. Dr. Hans Finsterer comes from the University of Vienna to demonstrate the incredible lengths to which scalpel may be safely used.

At Buffalo he removes an entire stomach, completely renovates the diseased organ and sews it back into place—without administering anesthesia.

Drugs injected directly into the nerve centres deadened all pain. Medical men will applaud the skill of the operator, but the public will be inclined to regard the patient as real hero of the epochal event.

Would you have the courage to look calmly on while a knife was plunged into your vitals? Yet not so long ago king and commoner alike were slow and amputated in great consciousness. When a leg had to be sawed off or internal growths cut out, the sufferer was strapped, gagged and forced to endure agonies beyond description.

Those were the "good old times," that disconcerted envious. It takes incidents like this to remind us what a privilege it is to live now, not then.

Knife in the York State Cheese-Box

Accusations by General Greene that New York State expended from $5 to $300 per cent. above open market prices for large canal materials angrily, however, that we can't entirely crow over yesterday. Politics continue to be infected with doubtful practices.

Governor Smith presses the investigation of a former public works regime, which reputedly permitted the payment of $960 for $435 generators; $112 a foot for dredge chains, procurable at 4 cents, and $622 per length for buoy chains, sold by the manufacturer at 60 cents.

Those would come down if officials responsible for such laxity were often sent up.

Pork raids mainly prevent economic administration hereabouts. Party workers must live.

Not Worth the Distinction

The million-dollar personal estate of Francis Peabody, resident of Aurora, Ill., eighty-two, overlooked by the assessors for five years prior to his death. Dispatches state that effort is being made to secure the money. It's far more important to ascertain how Peabody secured immunity.

Manhattan citizens, whose indignations have just been reappraised an extra odd billion, don't note any such indulgence among Father Knickerbocker's really experts. Protests rend the air, and the angriest voice heard is that of Eli Joseph, who doesn't consider the dollar distinction of seeing his name above Rockefeller's worth the penalty.

Evidently the scrap-iron business isn't all it's cracked up to be. Balance sheets may improve after battleships on which we've spent millions are knocked down to junk merchants at a penny on the dollar.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON "THE BOSS CELL"

By Garrett P. Serviss

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular
Interest

A FRIEND of mine believes, or pretends to believe, in what he calls "the Boss Cell." His argument runs somewhat like this: "A man is simply a walking colony of living cells, and each of which makes up the body with all its members, including the brain, and the nervous system, are individually of no account, not even of as much account as a community of common cells performing automatic functions like the beating of the heart, or the pulsing of the arteries, or the pulsing of the veins, or the pulsing of the capillaries, or the pulsing of the nerves, or the pulsing of the muscles, or the pulsing of the bones, or the pulsing of the skin, or the pulsing of the hair, or the pulsing of the nails, or the pulsing of the teeth, or the pulsing of the tongue, or the pulsing of the throat, or the pulsing of the lungs, or the pulsing of the stomach, or the pulsing of the intestines, or the pulsing of the bladder, or the pulsing of the rectum, or the pulsing of the vagina, or the pulsing of the uterus, or the pulsing of the ovaries, or the pulsing of the testes, or the pulsing of the prostate, or the pulsing of the penis, or the pulsing of the scrotum, or the pulsing of the perineum, or the pulsing of the anus, or the pulsing of the rectum, or the pulsing of the sigmoid, or the pulsing of the cecum, or the pulsing of the appendix, or the pulsing of the vermiform, or the pulsing of the ileum, or the pulsing of the jejunum, or the pulsing of the duodenum, or the pulsing of the pancreas, or the pulsing of the gallbladder, or the pulsing of the liver, or the pulsing of the spleen, or the pulsing of the stomach, or the pulsing of the esophagus, or the pulsing of the pharynx, or the pulsing of the larynx, or the pulsing of the trachea, or the pulsing of the bronchi, or the pulsing of the lungs, or the pulsing of the heart, or the pulsing of the aorta, or the pulsing of the arteries, or the pulsing of the veins, or the pulsing of the capillaries, or the pulsing of the nerves, or the pulsing of the muscles, or the pulsing of the bones, or the pulsing of the skin, or the pulsing of the hair, or the pulsing of the nails, or the pulsing of the teeth, or the pulsing of the tongue, or the pulsing of the throat, or the pulsing of the lungs, or the pulsing of the stomach, or the pulsing of the intestines, or the pulsing of the bladder, or the pulsing of the rectum, or the pulsing of the sigmoid, or the pulsing of the cecum, or the pulsing of the appendix, or the pulsing of the vermiform, or the pulsing of the ileum, or the pulsing of the jejunum, or the pulsing of the duodenum, or the pulsing of the pancreas, or the pulsing of the gallbladder, or the pulsing of the liver, or the pulsing of the spleen, or the pulsing of the stomach, or the pulsing of the esophagus, or the pulsing of the pharynx, or the pulsing of the larynx, or the pulsing of the trachea, or the pulsing of the bronchi, or the pulsing of the lungs, or the pulsing of the heart, or the pulsing of the aorta, or the pulsing of the arteries, or the pulsing of the veins, or the pulsing of the capillaries, or the pulsing of the nerves, or the pulsing of the muscles, or the pulsing of the bones, or the pulsing of the skin, or the pulsing of the hair, or the pulsing of the nails, or the pulsing of the teeth, or the pulsing of the tongue, or the pulsing of the throat, or the pulsing of the lungs, or the pulsing of the stomach, or the pulsing of the intestines, or the pulsing of the bladder, or the pulsing of the rectum, or the pulsing of the sigmoid, or the pulsing of the cecum, or the pulsing of the appendix, or the pulsing of the vermiform, or the pulsing of the ileum, or the pulsing of the jejunum, or the pulsing of the duodenum, or the pulsing of the pancreas, or the pulsing of the gallbladder, or the pulsing of the liver, or

How Fate Juggled the Jazz King and the Main Street Flapper

The Dramatic Whipsaws That Made a Huge Fiasco of a Thrilling Romance, a Syncopating Star of a Dreamy Virtuoso, and a Tender Nurse of a Little Madcap

Paul L. Specht, Temperamental King of Jazz, Who Aspired at One Time to Compose Symphonies and Play the Violin Like Kubelik.

Paul and His Bride During the honeymoon Period, at Their Cottage at Reading, Pa.

Lauretta Specht, Divorced Wife of the Jazz King, Who Cried for the Gay White Way and is Quietly Working to-day as a Nurse in a Hospital.

A BOY and girl dreamed on Main Street. He dreamed of fame as a virtuoso, she of a whizzy stage career. He yearned to compose symphonies, she to warble ragtime. He wanted the conservatory, she wanted Broadway. His castle in Spain was an ivory tower of solitude, hers the front row of the Folies. For he was Main Street's boy prodigy—dim, shy, shrinking. And she was Main Street's peppiest flapper—panting for gaiety and "life."

This pair of arch opposites fell in love. They were married—disillusioned—divorced. To-day, by an ironic prank of fate, he is the jazz-king leader of an orchestra blaring fox-trots in the heart of the white light, while she is a white-uniformed hospital nurse uptoeing past signs that read, "Quiet, please."

Certificate of Divorce in the Case of the Jazz King Against His Madcap Wife.

O. HENRY might have written Paul Specht's story, but if he had, some high-browed professor of literature would have coughed disparagingly. "It's clever, but it's life!"

This is the answer to the professors and the other realists. A few years ago Paul Specht was receiving invitations to play with the Silver Cornet Band of Sinking Springs, Pennsylvania, and Lauretta Morrison was just beginning to put up her back hair and to blush under the admiring eyes of the young bloods of Sioux City, Iowa.

It would be hard to find two young people more different in their temperaments and ambitions than Paul and Lauretta. Paul was a musician and the son of a musician. He was delicate of body, but swift of mind. The other kids of Sinking Springs regarded him with some derision and no little awe. Paul preferred to stay in the house practicing on a violin, when he might have been out putting jay birds, playing "rotation" or "winning the cat" on back-alley trapezes.

Lauretta was a beauty before she was fifteen. She had ripples of tawny hair and eyes of a deep blue-gray. Her cheeks were peachy ripened in the sun, and when she walked she seemed to radiate the joy of living. Beaux flocked to her. She was always the belle of the party. And nobody had a better time dancing music, feeling like a king. Lauretta adored them.

When Paul met Lauretta during a visit to the Middle West, he confessed to her that the dream of his life was to study at the Paris conservatory. He wanted to be a great conductor, perhaps to compose, to be another Kubelik or the American Beethoven.

Paul looked at her with admiration in his eyes. This girl was like a warming, glorious sun to him. She was so intense, so vital. She couldn't enter a room without heads turning. And she had vision, too. What a mate she would make for an ambitious young musician!

Lauretta returned his gaze with an agreeable sense of excitement. This boy was no different from the ones she had known. He was an artist. He was interesting. He would make a name for himself. Sinking Springs was not his destiny. He would know New York, London, Paris some day. Perhaps they would be all his feet. What a splendid prospect! And so they were married. The girl who wanted to swap Main Street for Broadway, and the boy who wanted to trade Sinking Springs for the conservatory, the symphony and the baton, they were married and they went to live in Reading, Pennsylvania. That was in 1915. Four years later Paul divorced her. She did not contest the suit, but from Paul's testimony and testimony of his father and mother and sister the observer may reconstruct a fair idea of what happened when the two dreamers with such different dreams were wed.

"She scribbled, scratched and fussed me with haps and nail files. She would start a rumpus in a restaurant, throw knives at me, throw food at me, and accuse me of flirting with every woman who came in the place. Once she threw all the plates at me, and once she broke down the door of my room after I had locked it and tore my pajamas to shreds."

The trouble was that she was dissatisfied with life in a small town. She was always complaining that it was "too slow here." She said she wanted faster company and faster times. "It was terrible for me. I was playing the violin at a hotel, where I was made the leader and soloist of the orchestra. I still wanted to be a composer, too. But how could I compose in such an atmosphere? My home life was driving me crazy. I lost weight. Finally I had to quit playing and go to the country. When we finally separated, I gained twenty-five pounds."

The records of the Pennsylvania court chronicle the divorce of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Specht in the Spring of 1919. After each went his and her own way. Each was free to pursue his and her own goals. Paul was at liberty to travel away to Paris and study at the conservatory. Lauretta and the Broadway stage. But what is the O. Henry finish furnished by Paul?

He reached Broadway, too. But it was not as the pale-faced, long-haired violinist, or the struggling young composer wrestling with the mysteries of theme and counterpoint in a Greenwich Village attic. Paul came to Broadway with the "Society Semaphores," and his first night in town he "knocked them cold," as the Rialto said, with an exhibition performance at a theatrical club. On these warm Spring nights you can find Lauretta, the girl who wanted poetry, sitting quietly by the bedside of a patient in a gray old building on a quiet street in upper Manhattan. And you can find Paul, the boy who craved solitude and peace, jockeying his harp to the thumping strains of "Haggy Waggy Blues" on a Times Square road-agent, where the clatter of conversation almost drowns out the roar of the subway, furious, frivolous forties some eighth or twenty stories below.

Does the shade of O. Henry, hovering over the city of the Four Million, look down at Paul and Lauretta and laugh at the professors of literature?

Medbury Says

A WELL-KNOWN beauty expert says that bathing with bread is very beneficial to the skin. Maybe he's right, but wouldn't a woman look silly scrubbing herself with a Parker House roll?

IT may be a wonderful cleanser, still you never see a lot of bread sitting in the soap dish on the bathtub.

GIRLS love beautiful complexion, but they're not going to wash their faces with a blarney.

CAN you imagine a housewife calling up the bakery and saying, "Send over a dozen loaves of bread right away, I've got a lot of washing to do."

THIS beauty expert didn't say how to use it, but you probably soak your face in two or three slices of bread and then rinse them in a couple of pieces of toast.

BREAD would be too common for millenarians, the chances are they'd use French pastry.

IF they were rich enough they could take a bath and use chocolate eclairs instead of soap.

CAN you imagine a mechanic trying to get his hands clean with a couple of popovers?

HE'D have to use three dozen corn muffins before he'd even get the garage dust off his face.

ANOTHER thing this specialist forgot to tell us was whether to sprinkle butter or jelly on the bread.

DOUGH may be a marvelous aid to a wonderful complexion, you never see any beautiful bakers on bakery wagons.

IN FAMILIES LIFE GIVE AS MUCH AS YOU DEMAND

Are you given to saying things to members of your family which have effect of hurting them?

You are prone to be overcritical, irritable and impatient in your home, eh?

Do you too often expect perfection from your point of view?

Surely you did not expect perfection in your life partner when you were married, and how can you expect your children to be without faults which are bound to annoy you?

You, yourself, are not all that perfect a specimen with a couple of companions.

Perhaps there is more about you of which your family might complain than there is to your boast of complaint of them.

On a street car in Montreal during the early part of the war, a young man in civilian's clothes was seated, when a well-dressed lady entered. All the seats being occupied the young man quickly arose and offered the lady his seat. After surveying him a moment, she said: "No, I do not care to receive any courtesies from a dissembler. A young man like you should be at the front."

"Well, have you any relatives at the front?" asked the young man.

"Yes," she replied. "A brother, an uncle and two cousins."

"Well," said the young man, "the next time you write, tell them if they find my hand to give it a decent burial."

Whereupon he raised a handkerchief, arm and wrist.

You can imagine the lady's embarrassment.

One day after visiting the telephone at Franklin Place with my little cousin, aged four, we met a friend who asked what she had seen at the park. My little cousin replied to the amusement of my friend and myself: "Oh, Billy, I saw a cow with a tail on its face."
